Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

I live in the Mississippi Gulf Coast area and have seen a dramatic change in the fish life in the past twenty years. Through constant fishing and degradation of the environment through population growth, we are destroying the life of the waters that give us life.

Please do the responsible action to protect our waters for us and our future generations.

Sincerely,
deborah emery

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

It seems like there is a terrible force pushing on every front to weaken every sort of environmental protection as much as possible. As a college student I don't know what to do, I sign the emails and I write little notes and what is the effect when millions of dollars are being spent just to get all of these environmental productions to happen. I realize I am not incredibly informed on the specific information about the ocean habitats. I have my information from PIRG and I also realize that it could be skewed, but if there are already protections in place, please, please, please do not reverse them, we do not need to be taking yet another leap backwards environmentally, we have done that enough in the past four years, and yes even more than four years under Clinton and Bush Sr. It seems that if these protections are already in place they have no need to be removed, as a country we have plenty of money and a humonguous economy even if it may be shrinking slightly we have way more of everything than we need (obviously not everyone, but this reduction wouldn't be helping those people anyway). Just please do everything you can to protect the environment and anything natural, the destruction many times cannot be reversed, we cannot bring back any of the species we have already killed, and we don't need more money, lets try to sustain instead of growing ever larger and destroying ever more. Thank you for anything you can do, specifically at this moment, I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken the existing essential fish habitat guidelines which I know so little about.

Sincerely,

Steven P. Diesburg

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

When faced with tough decisions, we all know how easy it is for us to focus in on immediate benefits, and turn a blind eye to future consequences. As we can see throughout history, there seems to be a strong tendency to act on impulse. And we can also see how this has backfired.

Long ago, a wise man said "It is a proverbial mistake to stumble over the same stone twice." Well today, in 2004, twice sounds like a slight underestimation and I'm sure you'd agree it is absolutely essential, now more than ever before, that we begin to take responsibility, and learn from past mistakes.

We must take care of the earth. It is our home. Our children and grandchildren will have to pay for every overindulgence we allow ourselves now. With incredibly high interest rates!

I do not think most people are selfish at heart. I think that many are just nearsighted. And I trust that you are working to help redirect these currents. I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines. If necessary, you even have my support in strengthening restrictions.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines. Best available science should determine how to conserve all species, considering not only the status of individual species but their vulnerability to pollution, global warming, and the impacts of the harvesting of other species. Predator species such as sharks, marlin and tuna need protection for the sake of ocean ecology as a whole.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

Ocean habitats, which include coral, sea grasses, sandy bottoms and rocks, all provide fish with the food, shelter, spawning areas and nursing grounds that are essential to their continued survival. The various habitats that are essential to fish survival are collectively called essential fish habitat.

Currently, under the Magnuson-Stevens Act, essential fish habitat is protected under federal law. However, the National Marine Fisheries Service (NMFS), the agency in charge of federal fisheries, is currently considering making changes to the existing protections.

The National Marine Fisheries Service has requested that the public comment on potential revisions to the essential fish habitat guidelines. This is the second time that the National Marine Fisheries Service has requested comments in several months. Last time, only about 50 groups commented, so I hope my voice will make an impact.

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

Our oceans no longer sustain as much life as they used to. Overfishing, habitat destruction, and poor management have all led to this alarming decline in the health of our oceans. We must allow our oceans to recover from careless management over the last several decades.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

California's ocean no longer sustains as much life as it used to. Overfishing, habitat destruction, and cruise ship pollution have all led to an alarming decline in the health of our oceans, where marine life and delicate ecosystems are threatened. I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

As a scientist currently engaged in identifying and understanding the genetic variation present in wild fish populations, the health of our nation's (and the world's) oceans are of supreme importance to me and to the successful completion of my work.

Furthermore, through my work I have become aware of the fragility of fish habitat in freshwater and marine environments, in the pacific northwest in particular but throughout the nation in general.

I believe the long-term health of our nation lies in strong protection of our natural resources, so that they remain healthy and productive for generations to come. I believe this point of view reflects not only principles of environmental responsibility but sensible business and political strategy as well.

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

With more and more demands on our natural resources, it is all the more important to have and strengthen laws which protect them. If not, eventually it will affect the quality of life for all of us and our children. In fact, it is easier now to just hold back on short term profits, rather than later, in the long run, to realize we have ruined the entire habitat through poor management and greed.

We depend on the world's water for our very life, even if indirectly. Let us please protect it.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines. Our ecosystem is sensitive to our intrusive actions and often we don't do enough to protect the fragile balance of nature. I am saddened by the waste created by indiscriminate fishing techniques and the thought that we have the ability to protect and help sustain ocean life yet instead we choose to run the risk of severely depleting fish populations, possible extinction and disruption of the food chain. Please urge protection over profit.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines. We are in danger of losing fish species and endangering the marine ecosystem, which will have effects on weather, on the health of future generations (through the dioxins and PCB's in fish). If anything, we need to strengthen guidelines.

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

Even with existing protections, ocean resources are being depleted and damaged by overfishing, pollution, and poor management. To weaken ocean protection at this moment, when the oceans are already in harm's way, would be detrimental to species that rely on a healthy ocean habitat, and even more pressingly to citizens who depend on the health of the ocean and marine animal stocks to earn their livelihood.

I am writing to you today to urge you to protect our oceans, which are part of the lifeblood for all of civilization.

Currently, under the Magnuson-Stevens Act, essential fish habitat is protected under federal law. However, under the current Administration, an approach is being taken to seriously undermine all protections of ocean, land, and wildlife.

I implore you to not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines. The creatures that inhabit our waters are an integral part of our existence and without them the world as we know it will cease. Jellyfish and plankton are necessary for photosynthesis to take place and the more toxic and polluted our water gets, the more erratic our weather patterns will become. Not to mention the hundreds of species that are currently dying (like loggerhead turtles, sea birds, and fish) because of the vast amounts of waste, garbage, and fishing nets and lines that are dumped across our oceans. Not only should there be regulations for water vessels, but they should also be enforced.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

WE urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

WE ARE ESPECIALLY CONCERNED WITH THE DESTRUCTIVE METHODS USED BY THE COMMERCIAL FISHING INDUSTRY. PURSEINERS DESTROY NOT ONLY HUGE NUMBERS OF FISH, BUT DESTROY THE HABITAT NECESSARY FOR REGENERATION OF SPECIES.

IT HAS BEEN A SIMPLE MATTER TO PUT RESTRICTIONS ON SPORT-FISHERING , AS THEY ARE LESS POWERFUL AND LESS ORGANIZED.

A SINGLE PURSEINER IN A SINGLE NIGHT TAKES IN MORE FISH THAN THE ENTIRE SO. CALIFORNIA SPORT FISHING FLEET DOES IN AN ENTIRE YEAR!

PLEASE GO AFTER THE TRUE CULPRITS : COPORATE FISHING AND INDUSTRIAL POLLUTION.

THANK YOU

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

Clearly it is in all of our best interests if our oceans are not overfished and polluted to a downward spiral of less fish to catch, less appealing recreation and less healthy ecosystems to support life.

Do not let the Bush administration weaken existing ocean protections. We are watching what his administration does in addition to the empty promises he gives.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

With so much pressure on the environment, it is critical to continue with the laws and guidelines we have in place to protect our marine habitats. It is a no-brainer to connect the dots: the health of our planet and the people on it is directly tied to the health of the tiniest organisms in our world's oceans and seas. If the waters are healthy enough for them to thrive, then so will the fish and so will we.

We are no longer simply entering a time when we will have to be more careful....that time has already passed! It is now imperative. If we wish to leave anything at all for your children and their children and THEIR children, we must act responsibly NOW.

Again, I urge you to keep existing guidelines in place. We need sustainable fishing, not overfishing; we need to maintain rather than destroy sensitive marine environments, reefs, etc; and, I think we all want to eat a nice, tasty meal of fresh ocean-run fish - not cruise ship poop!

Do the right thing!

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

Let's say we look at this issue from a strictly self-interested point of view; humans want (and in some places, need) to eat fish and other ocean creatures. If there is no habitat for those creatures to thrive in, then there will be none for humans to consume. And doesn't it make sense, for our own health, that we do all we can to make sure the creatures we do consume are as healthy and clean as they should be? Why spend millions telling people how healthy it is to eat fish, etc., and then have to spend millions warning people of high mercury levels, cleaning up toxic spills, and policing the waters to prevent over-fishing? It just doesn't make sense.

I hope you are a sensible person who will do whatever it takes to restore our oceans to their healthiest state.

Sincerely,
Megan McCoy

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

California's ocean no longer sustains as much life as it used to. Overfishing, habitat destruction, and cruise ship pollution have all led to an alarming decline in the health of our oceans, where marine life and delicate ecosystems are threatened.

Incredibly, special interests are working to convince the Bush administration to weaken existing ocean protections. That would be the wrong thing to do at this moment.

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

As a citizen of the United States and of the world, and as a resident of the Southern New Jersey shore area, I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines. We need to carefully protect habitat for both fish and other ocean and coastal area dwellers. This includes reducing pollution, preventing offshore oil and gas drilling, protecting fishing stocks, and generally learning MORE about how these critical ECOSYSTEMS operate.

Please do ALL YOU CAN to protect our oceans. We cannot afford to weaken the current fish habitat guidelines, simply for short-term gains.

Thank you for your attention to this critical matter.

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines. The oceans are very important to all life including our own. What are we teaching our children when we do nothing other than cause destruction. If we destroy our oceans there will be nothing left to explore, show or tell stories of to the next generation. Not to mention, at this rate of destruction our children's children may not be. Please take action as soon as possible. We need leaders to be our voices and save the lives of all the animals and habitat that do not have voices that we understand.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

We need to be responsible custodians of our natural resources. We need to think of the long term health of the ocean and not short term political considerations. We need stronger regulatory protections of the oceans, not weaker.

The future of humanity depends on the viability of these ecosystems. Planetary ecosystems are humankind's life support system. Don't mess with it.

The special-interest driven policy you're considering right now is outrageous.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

I believe a new comprehensive study of all the federal agencies with responsibility for care of our ocean assets has just concluded that the US fisheries as well as those of the larger world are in trouble. This is the time for more cooperation and greater protection of fisheries, not less.

It seems the root cause of much pollution entering the oceans is coming from the heartland, where I live. I think enforcement of and improvements to clean water laws are very important steps for fisheries improvement.

Good luck in your efforts on this front,

Sincerely,

Cindy Nicholson

In addition, please stop allowing fishermen to pour deadly bleach into our oceans and rivers, There are alternative cleansers to use that will not endanger our (every person's!) food chain and waters.

Stop using lead for weights too!!! There are other solutions! Please, make this known to all fishermen!!!!

I ask that you keep the long term effects that weakening the fish habitat guidelines in mind before reaching a decision. When considering this as well as the fact that our oceans do not have as much life as they once did, weakening regulations could have a very negative impact.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

It is quite simple actually...last century our land was abused and overfarmed creating the 'Dust Bowl' in the midwest. There are example after example of what can happen when we are no longer responsible stewards of the land. Is the ocean any different?

I live on the coast of North Carolina and have been going to the North and South Carolina coasts since I was but a small boy. Along our coastline, the main problems that I observe are weak coastal development plans leading to storm water runoff and closures of myriads of shellfish waters, habitat loss and over-development.

These are many other issues, but I do not see our population getting any smaller. Therefore, I do not see our environmental problems going away. If anything, existing protection needs to be increased. At the very least allowed to remain as is. I appreciate your time and consideration of this matter.

Sincerely,

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines. If any changes are to be made, they should be toward the goals of increasing protections for fragile marine habitats, such as coral reefs and estuaries, and of making sure that seafood harvests can remain sustainable. Our oceans provide an invaluable source of food that is in jeopardy due to overfishing, development, and pollution. If changes are not made to reverse the current destructive trends, this critical resource could be destroyed, permanently. Yet the Bush administration actually wants to accelerate the pace of destruction. It makes absolutely no sense to me - make a few extra bucks now, and have nothing in the future?

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

Recently, I heard a news report regarding the dumping of toxic waste for years off the New Jersey coast...and of dead fish washing ashore.

Then I heard reports of pods of dolphins that were beaching on the shores of Florida and dying...then heard reports saying "the Navy Sonar underwater exercises had nothing to do with possibility that the dolphin brains had been affected by the prolonged Sonar high-frequency pulses".

For years...there have been reports of the danger of radio-active wastes LEAKING from the Hanford Nuclear site and SEEPING UNDERGROUND into the Coloumbia River...CONTAMINATING ALL WILD LIFE FROM THAT SITE TO THE SEA!!!

Now those concerned groups who called attention to this approaching disaster over the years...and whose fears were dismissed...are seeing this come to pass!!!

Tests now show radio-active wastes ARE SEEPING underground and ARE APPROACHING the Columbia River and will then drain into the Pacific Ocean and dissipate into the migrating salmon and whale routes. For millions of years whales have used these routes on their way to Alaska to calve their newborns...and now this seepage will not only contaminate their food chain...causing their deaths...for eons to come..but will descimate the salmon fishing industry all along the Pacific Northwest Coast, as well!!!

Will the American People be affected by this seepage?...EVERY DAY OF THEIR LIVES!!!...

I IMPLORE YOU TO PROTECT OUR OCEANS AND OUR PEOPLE.

HONOR YOUR SENSE OF WHAT IS RIGHT FOR OUR OCEANS AND OUR PEOPLE!!!....BY NOT WEAKENING EXISTING ESSENTIAL FISH HABITAT GUIDELINES...and by adding STRICTER ONES!!!

Sincerely,

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

The oceans are the engines of life of this planet. When we kill them we will shut off our oxygen supply, cut the food webs off at the root, and destroy the planet's climate regulation. You know the details of these processes much better than I do. Why would you even consider not doing your job, just so some corporations can make quick profits then morph into some other industry to exploit the next natural resource they believe is theirs for the taking? This is not something to play politics with. You know how serious it is.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

Ever healthier ocean ecosystems are our responsibility. The USA must be a global leader in effective conserving, conservative policies for ocean natural systems. Nonsustainable exploitation must be considered criminal.

This does not mean allowing today's companies and practices to throw the oceans out of whack. This does mean conservative, literally conserving, stewardship of the oceans for the benefit of future generations. Future generations that require healthy oceans as part of our planets biosphere and, ultimately, as an essential element of mankind's quality of life.

I urge the National Marine Fisheries Service to protect essential fish habitat with intense zeal and sense of purpose. This includes using public pressure on the investors in offending companies and blowing the whistle on officials who are interfering with zealous protection of fish habitat, even elected officials who are seeking reelection and do not choose to publicize their record on preserving and protecting fish habitat.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines. A mile off shore is already over fished and polluted. Allowing more could easily destroy even the oceans ability to sustain itself.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines. As you know, life originated in the oceans (and some of the wiser(?) forms have returned thereto). The oceans remain a resource that-- though we are capable of impairing it permanently-- we should strive self-interestedly to protect. No existing essential fish-habitat guidelines should be weakened.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I remember learning about the environmental consequences of overpopulation and abuse of the natural world years ago, when I was a schoolgirl. It seems the warnings were on target and the nightmare scenario is now unfolding.

I think we still have time to prevent the worst possible outcome of our own wasteful ways, and the negligent fishing practices of the developing nations of the world.

Please take a firm stand to protect our oceans and to maintain existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

The U.S. needs to set an example for the rest of the world in protecting habitat, and fishing in a sustainable manner. (I'd like to think that someday my grandchildren will still be able to eat seafood, but in moderation.)

Let us not be shortsighted and allow devastation that following generations cannot reverse.

Sincerely,
Margaret Manzi

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

How can you possibly consider weakening existing guidelines which protect our oceans and marine habitat? Provisions of the Magnusen-Stevens Act must not be encroached upon! While Mr. Bush doesn't give a damn about the future since, after all, "we'll all be dead," surely you know that your decision regarding this matter will have a severe impact on future generations, perhaps as soon as that of your grandchildren.

I urge you to protect our oceans and not let special interests sway you to weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines. We are all aware of the notable reduction in the number of fish due to loss of habitat in this current generation. Even more distressing is the recent news about the threat posed by iodine levels in fish. Who knows what other chemical toxins are building up as we write, due to the degradation of ocean habitat due to absence of regulations and/or enforcement?

Please do all in your power not to allow any weakening of current guidelines, and if anything, please make them stronger.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

Last year an important survey of the world's oceans noted drastic declines, up to ninety percent, in fish populations, especially those at the top of the food chain.

Pollution, urban run-off, uncontrolled and unregulated aquaculture, overfishing by industrial trawlers: Trawlers that drag nets more than a mile long, literally removing all fish from huge swaths. Nets that roll across the sea bed (a process sometimes likened to strip mining), destroying habitat. These are all major threats to the oceans.

International cooperation, truly sustainable harvesting of fish, and the establishment and maintenance of sanctuaries are all vital to the long term health of our oceans.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

Overfishing, habitat destruction, and cruise ship pollution all have led to an alarming decline in the health of our oceans. Marine life and delicate ecosystems are threatened by all these activities.

Essential fish habitats provide fish with the food, shelter, spawning areas, and nursing grounds that are essential to their continued survival. Please protect these habitats, and do not allow any weakening of existing ocean protections.

Thank you for your kind consideration of these comments.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines. The health of species affected by human actions is a measuring stick for the health of the natural environment as a whole. The decline one species often begins a chain reaction that harms or destroys multiple species. And as many people neglect to realize, we are intimately connected to Earth's natural environment. Continued degradation of natural habitats in the name of special interests will mean denial and suffering for future generations and maybe our own.

Sincerely,

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

Our oceans provide an abundance of known benefits to us, as well being a resource for scientific research that may yet provide untold treasures (economically, environmentally and aesthetically).

Currently, we reap the following partial list of benefits from the ocean:

Health - from eating seafood

Economic - from our various National Fisheries (including seaweed harvesting & shellfish), from Maine to Alaska

Global Climate regulation

Economic - from multi-millions of dollars worth of tourism and cruise ships and waterfront properties

Adds jobs & export economy to our weak domestic economy

Brings tourists - to our country, since we are less polluted than other areas of the world's oceans

Keeping our marine life habitat healthy is vital to our health, wealth & happiness. Please protect and strengthen the current guidelines for ocean health and fish habitat.

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines. The oceans are part of the earth's many and diverse ecosystems. If these ecosystems unravel and we keep losing species at such an alarming rate-never in the history of our earth have we lost so many species! Unstable environments are much more vulnerable to all kinds of changes and can lead to floods, extremes in temperatures, disease, and famine. Our grandchildren deserve better. We all are a part of the earth.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

As the founder of the all-volunteer habitat protection group, Sealwatch, which safeguards the harbor seal haulout at the mouth of the Russian River in Jenner, northern California, I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

It should be clear, especially to those of us who are tasked with protecting our ocean waters, that the time to repair and restore is fast running out.

No fish. No seals or sea lions. No whales, great and small. Empty reefs.

It is all of our responsibility to care for our beautiful ocean planet.

Sincerely,
Dian Hardy

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

Our oceans are a tremendous global resource, and need to be protected -- problems ranging from pollution to climate change are having a detrimental effect on our oceans. For the benefit of sustainable use of our oceans, and for the benefit of future generations to have access to healthy ocean environments and the species they support, please DO NOT weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I strongly urge you to do everything in your power to protect our oceans and its marine life. Please do not weaken the pre-existing essential fish habitat guidelines. For If they are changed now they might continue to deteriorate in the future. Being that the "earth" is covered with over 70% water it is extremely important to protect the fish and all other sea life and it's natural cycle.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines. I live near the sea and Puget Sound which benefit me directly in many ways, and I have observed the heavy impact of growing human populations on the health of shoreline, estuarial, and ocean maritime life. We need the full strength and action of all levels of government to enforce existing standards and to add new guidelines and controls where required.

Every year we seem to lose a little bit more of our ocean's life and balance. Soon (if not already), this will catch up with us and the the cost to recover will swamp any preventative costs we could incur.
